Online Capacity Development Programme on Code on Wages, 2019

March 21-24, 2022

V.V. Giri National Labour Institute
Noida– 201301, Gautam Budh Nagar
Uttar Pradesh

BACKGROUND

The Government of India (GoI) has enacted the Code on Wages 2019 (hereafter referred to as the wage code) on 8 August 2019. Subsequent to the enactment of the wage code, the GoI has published the draft Wage Code (Central) Rules (hereafter referred to as the wage rules) in the form of a gazette notification on 7 July 2020. The Government at present is reviewing the draft Wage Code (Central) Rules on the basis of comments and suggestions received from the stakeholders and will shortly notify the final rules, thereby making the wage code effective and operational. Meanwhile, the State Governments are also in the process of drafting their respective state wage code rules, so that the wage code can be made effective at the state level. The implementation of the code and rules will also witness the beginning of a new phase in the wage policy of India, with a concomitant repealing of the existing four wage-related regulations on the payment of wages, minimum wages, payment of bonus and the equal remuneration.

Both the wage code and the wage rules have introduced several aspects of reform related to the minimum wage, payment of wages and equal remuneration system of the country. The wage code, for the first time, has explicitly stated the objective it intends to achieve, that is “to promote equity and labour welfare on the one hand and encourage investment and setting up of more enterprises, on the other, thereby catalysing creation of more employment opportunities”. The wage code has universalised application of minimum wages and floor wages to all wage earners, apart from simplifying the minimum wage structure to achieve the stated objective from the workers’ perspective. Similarly, the wage rules have, for the first time, included in their ambit the manner and criteria of fixation, revision and adjustment of floor wages and the minimum rate of wages. It, therefore, becomes imperative to understand the changes in the wage code and its implications on workers and businesses. In this context, the V.V. Giri National Labour Institute is conducting a two day capacity development training course with the following objectives.
